NM Economic Development Partnership Board Names Tim Nitti as New President/CEO

SANTA FE, N.M. - The Board of Directors of the New Mexico Economic Development Partnership today announced the selection of Tim Nitti as the organization's new President and CEO. In his new role, Nitti will take the lead in the Partnership's efforts to attract new businesses and jobs to New Mexico.

"We're excited to have someone with Tim's experience and success as an economic developer to lead the Economic Development Partnership and to build on the momentum we are seeing in New Mexico," said Pat Vincent-Collawn, Chair of the Partnership board. "He has a proven track record and we're confident that under his guidance the Partnership will bring new business to the state and help existing businesses grow and expand."

Nitti's 18 years of experience includes founding and operating GeoAnalytics Consulting LLC, an advisory firm focused on helping businesses choose locations that are best suited to their needs. Additionally, he served as a principal with KLG Advisors, a leading advisory firm for global companies looking to expand into new locations based on their broader goals for business and workforce needs.

During his time at KLG Advisors, he consulted for global corporations such as Goldman Sachs, Fidelity Investments, MetLife, Credit Suisse and Morgan Stanley and many others.

"Tim's strong track record of helping businesses find the right locations and achieve success, especially during challenging economic times, makes him the right choice for New Mexico," said Matt Geisel, Secretary-designate of the New Mexico Economic Development Department. "His skills and experience on a global scale will help our state attract new and viable businesses that will help grow our economy and provide good jobs to our residents."

The New Mexico Economic Development Partnership is an organization contracted by the New Mexico Economic Development Department to assist businesses and corporations locate and expand in the state. They offer a wide range of services such as real estate and site selection advisement, help with identifying and applying for incentives, facilitating the permitting process, providing data on key business factors, strategic planning with key government and community officials and more.
